In the last century a Frenchman named Mathulus was so sure he had succeeded in equaring the circle that he offered a reward of $1,000 to anyone who proved his solution arroneous. It was shown to be erroneous if not to his own satisfaction, at least to that of the courts, and he had to pay the money. Mathematicians have long been convinced that the solution was impossible, but it is only a few years since they were able to demonstrate this. A Gorman professor named Landmann published in 1882 a demonstration, which was accepted by the scientido world as satisfactory; so that wouldbe squarers of the circle may now rest from their labors, seeing that it
